About University

Akaki Tsereteli State University, Georgia was founded in 1933, is one of Georgia's oldest state educational centers with a well-developed infrastructure. The study process at ATSU is carried out at every level: Bachelor, Master and PhD, which are accredited by the Ministry of Georgia of Education and Science. At present, due to the success of the renovations, the University has about 10,000 students in nine faculties.

The University collaborates productively with universities and scientific centers of the EU, EE. UU. And Eastern countries to establish conditions that meet international accreditation / approval standards and create the best environment for students.

In 1990, the university was transformed into Akaki Tsereteli State University, being named after Georgian poet and national liberation movement figure Akaki Tsereteli.
