

Penza State University

About University

The history of Penza State University goes back to July 1943, when Odessa Industrial Institute was relocated to Penza from the city invaded by the Nazi army. By 1 November that year, everything had been ready to accept students. 600 individuals, including 525 freshmen, started their studies here. Sergey Berezko, first Director of the Institute, is credited with laying down the basis for successful growth of the educational institution.

In the 1940s, the city and the region felt the great need in professionals in industries, and the new educational institution was to satisfy that growing demand. Originally, the university was called Penza Industrial Institute and comprised three faculties, namely, Faculty of Mechanics and Technology
