

About University

The newly-established Zhengzhou University (ZZU) was founded on July 10, 2000 after combination of the former Zhengzhou University, Zhengzhou Industrial University and Henan Medical University. ZZU is now a comprehensive university with a complete structure of disciplines, ranging from science, engineering, medicine, arts, history, philosophy to law, economics and administration, etc.

The former Zhengzhou University was set up in 1956, the first comprehensive university established by the State after the founding of new China. In 1991, Huanghe University was merged into Zhengzhou University. In June, 1996, State Development Planning Commission gave a reply that formally put ZZU on the list of institutes of higher education, namely the National Project 211 of key construction. In November, 1996, ZZU passed the preliminary examination conducted by the Agency of National Project 211. Before the grand merging in 2000, the former ZZU had basically been built into a comprehensive university that embraced complete disciplines with permeation of arts and science, engineering, finance, politics and law, with strength in architecture, civil engineering and oceanography.
